

NUDE

A woman is floating in a pool of water with a vibrant orange-red hue. She is wearing a red dress and a large, flowing white tulle skirt. Her body is partially submerged, and her legs are bent. The water's surface is rippled, creating a textured background. The word "NUDE" is written in large, white, outlined letters across the top of the image.

Welcome to the #34 WET issue of NUDE Magazine.

We have an incredible display of photography for your eyes with this compilation. Water, one of the world's most beautiful natural resources, can be also used to create great photographs.

We've got Alex Sher's work presented An award-winning underwater fine art photographer internationally recognized for his distinctive depiction of the feminine sensuality producing surreal and stunning photographs. He presents two visions within one viewing experience; commenting not only on the surface of things, but also on what may lie hidden beneath.

Subjects and scenes reflected in water provide a unique way to photograph the world around us as the water acts as a mirror and gives a different perspective on something ordinary. Such as in the work of David Wirt. Additionally, Dan Katz's fine nude art represents a discovery of the human form in water, taking advantage of light and distortion, and bodies floating in space within a surreal blur of color.

And if you love paintings and photography, then the work of Ben Ernst is exceptional. Influenced by the paintings of Egon Schiele and the use of light by Rembrandt, his collection is canvas and stills combined.

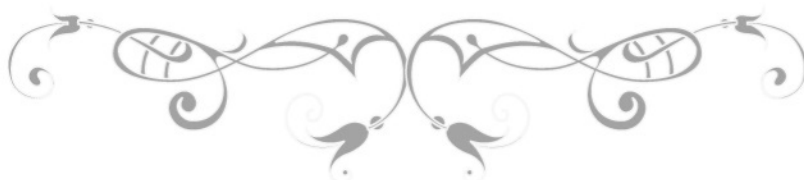

Water as an element offers a thousand interpretations and is a personal source of artistic inspiration for man as it's possible to capture it in many forms rain, dew, fog, ice, snow and thus be able to create ever-changing images.

We hope that you enjoy the fluidity of the images and reflect on the beauty of the feminine form.

Alex Sher was born in Ukraine and moved to United States with his family in 1995.

Sher started showing his photographs in early nineties. He was considering himself an emerging artist until one of his pieces was stolen from an exhibition in Kyiv, leading him to the epiphany that his works represented a significant value to the public.

Later in US Sher began experimenting with underwater photography and has evolved from a marine wildlife photographer, to figurative fine art, to monochrome black and white works, and into his latest artistic innovation that weaves together the figurative and the abstract.

Sher's work began to attract extensive interest in 2015. To date, his works has been exhibited in London, Paris, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and other major cities including the Louvre Museum in Paris. His first solo show was held in 2016 at Los Angeles's Bruce Lurie Gallery. Since his debut, he has had six exclusive exhibitions, has been in numerous group exhibitions, and has participated in prominent art fairs.

In 2018 his first photo book "Mermaids" was published.

Sher mastered the profession of underwater coaching. Bringing forth this spiritual blending with the water and his technical and artistic innovations with the camera, he generously shares his techniques with his models and aspiring photographers.
